

Keeping An Eye On The Futurama

NEW YORK—MAKING A DATE FOR THE GENERAL MOTORS FUTURAMA when the New York World's Fair opens a year from now are Frederic G. Donner, General Motors chairman, (left) and Robert Moses, Fair president. Here they compare the GM Futurama Building as it looks today under construction on a seven acre site at Flushing Meadow and the way it will look on April 22, 1964. Mr. Donner said that work on GM's 240,000-square-foot exhibit is on schedule. The Futurama will include a ride which will carry more than 70,000 World's Fair visitors a day on a worldwide adventure into man's potential for progress.

SCIENCE SKETCHES

EATING 'OIL' may soon be helpful as a dietary aid. A biological process has been developed to make proteins and vitamin supplements from petroleum products.

WELDING has become less colorful, more precise, reports Alloy Rods Company. The industry has adopted a number-coding system to replace bands of color which are faded by intense heat necessary for electric arc welding.

PLASTIC TUBAS, 40 per cent lighter than metal versions of the bulky instruments, have been developed. Only mouthpiece is brass.
